DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments, see the first paragraph on page 5, filed 8/2/2004, with respect to an objection to the specification have been fully considered and are persuasive. The objection to the specification has been withdrawn.

2. Applicant's arguments, see paragraphs 2-3 of page 5, filed 8/2/2004, with respect to objections to claims 1 and 4-7 have been fully considered and are persuasive. The objections to claims 1 and 4-7 have been withdrawn.

3. The indicated allowability of claims 1-7 is withdrawn in view of the newly discovered reference to U.S. Patent 6,393,017 to Galvin et al. Rejections based on the newly cited reference follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

5. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent 6,393,017 to Galvin et al.

Regarding claims 1 and 4, Galvin discloses a telephone controller that controls plural telephone sets via LAN connected to the Internet (the virtual PBX system 100), comprising: a receiver that receives a message sent by the telephone set for requesting an IP address (the user log in described in lines 35-49 of column 7); a control circuit that generates the ID and the extension of the telephone set in case the message for requesting the IP address is received (the extension is the extension stored in the table of Figure 4 and the ID is the combination of the group ID 402, extension 404, and IP address 406 which are created in the table of Figure 4); an IP address allocation circuit that allocates the IP address of the telephone set (as indicated in lines 24-29, the IP address is allocated in the table – it's presence indicates that the user is logged on to the system); a table that stores the ID, the extension and the IP address (the table of Figure 4); and a notifying unit that notifies the telephone set of the ID, the extension and the IP address (the user must receive a response to the log in request in order to know the result).

Regarding claims 2 and 5, Galvin discloses the limitation that when its extension or its user name is included in the message for requesting the IP address, the control circuit generates its ID based upon the extension or the user name in the alias that is included in the login as described in lines 8-11 of column 2.

Regarding claims 3 and 6, as described above, the ID is the combination fields 402, 404, and 406 in Figure 4. The user name and the domain name are a part of the IP address and the extension is the user extension 404. Thus, the ID is composed of the domain name, the extension, and the user name disclosing the limitations of claims 3 and 6.

Regarding claim 7, Galvin teaches that the user can participate in telephone conferences via the PBX once logged in (see lines 43-49 of column 7) and that the IP address is linked to the virtual extension of the user once successfully logged in (lines 16-19 of column 8). This discloses the limitation that in case a connection request message is sent from the telephone set, the control circuit acquires an IP address corresponding to ID by retrieving the table using the ID included in the connection request message and notifies a telephone set to which the IP address is allocated of call in coming as a telephone set wishing to establish communication with the user would do so using the user's ID via the PBX which would locate the user via the registered IP address.
